A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on June 5, 2009 has been entered.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

Claim 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Stone (U.S. Patent No. 6,432,929).

Stone discloses the claimed beverage containing glucosamine.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(a) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Stone (U.S. Patent No. 6,632,929).

Stone discloses a beverage comprising glucosamine (column 13, Table 5).

Stone further discloses a method for making said beverage wherein the cartilage supplement is added to drink base and the combination is heated to "preferably but not necessarily, at temperatures below those used in heat pasteurization process" (column 8, lines 15-31). Further note that Stone discloses "total residence time of cartilage solution at elevated temperatures is minimal, thereby minimizing any heat inactivation of the cartilage supplement. For example, the product temperature may be close to 195 F" (column 8, lines 42-56). Since the instant claims encompass heat pasteurization for a minimal amount of time, such as 1 second, the claimed methods read on the method disclosed by Stone. The reduction of colony forming units by at least 50% would have been inherent in the process disclosed by Stone.

Applicant's arguments filed June 5, 2009 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant contends that Stone teaches away from pasteurizing the drink after addition of cartilage supplement. Applicant has also filed a declaration by Todd Banner which states that glucosamine stability decreases as the temperature is increased. Applicant's arguments and the Declaration have been considered but have not been found persuasive. Note that the Attached Appendix A has not been found. Further, the declaration states that the beverage containing glucosamine was heated for at least 10 minutes. However, note that the claimed methods encompass heating glucosamine containing beverage for just 1 second (see, for example, claim 5). Note that Stone teaches "the total residence time of the cartilage solution at elevated temperatures is minimal, thereby minimizing any heat inactivation of the cartilage supplement. For example, the product temperature may be close to 195 F at the mix tank" (column 8, lines 42-56). Thus, based on the teaching by Stone, a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the claimed invention would have expected minimal degradation of glucosamine when undergoing heat-pasteurization for a minimal amount of time, such as 1 second as encompassed by the claims.
